Fertilization of human oocytes by in vitro matured sheep oocytes. The object of the present study was to determine whether the efficiency of human oocyte fertilization can be improved by interspecies cross-breeding. Human unfertilized oocytes were inseminated with bovine or sheep oocytes. The first cleavage rate of the human oocytes inseminated with sheep oocytes was as good as that of those inseminated with bovine oocytes ($P > 0.05$), and the in vitro fertilization efficiency of the human oocytes inseminated with sheep oocytes was greater than that with bovine oocytes. The present data provide evidence that the efficiency of human oocyte fertilization by interspecies cross-breeding can be improved.

Q: iOS: How to show views in tableview dynamically according to the number of row I'm new to iOS. I am facing some difficulties showing the my view dynamically. Actually, I'm working on collecting data from an api. Data collection is as follows: When I click on the button in my tableview, my tableView displays the whole data according to the number of rows in the tableView. However, I have to display only 5 rows at a time from the view.

Q: Scroll event not triggering I have a UIScrollView that is inside a UIView that is inside a UIViewController. Here is the hierarchy (I didn't make it): And the scrollview is setup like this:
self.movieView.contentMode = UIViewContentModeScaleAspectFill;

self.movieView.autoresizingMask =
UIViewAutoresizingFlexibleWidth |
UIViewAutoresizingFlexibleHeight;
self.movieView.scrollEnabled = YES;
[self.movieView setContentSize:CGSizeMake(640,320)];

When the user touches the screen, I want to start an animation and I create a UITouchesMoved method like so: - (void)touchesBegan:(NSSet *)touches withEvent:(UIEvent *)event { [self animate]; }

I have two problems that I'm not sure how to solve: When I touch the screen, the animation does start, but when the user starts scrolling, the animation is put on hold. Is there a way to cancel the animation when the user starts scrolling? When the user scrolls all the way to the top of the scroll view, the animation runs twice. Is there a way to prevent this? A: To cancel an animation, call `[myView.animationQueue cancelAllAnimations]`; where `myView` is the view you are animating. The present invention relates to a device for measuring a position and/or angle of a body with reference to a stationary reference point or axis, for example a car body. Various systems for measuring the position and/or angle of a body with reference to a stationary reference point or axis are known, for example, for determining the body position and/or orientation, for implementing automatic parking systems, and for calculating the performance of motors and/or mechanical devices. In the case of an automatic parking system for a vehicle, the measuring device may be, for example, disposed on the body of the vehicle, so that the body position and/or angle (parking position) is determined and the parking movements are controlled as a function of the position and/or angle. Such a system is disclosed in EP 0 031 730 B1, for example, in which a measuring device comprises an optical measuring system
